These photo's I agree seem to ask more questions. Jack does not seem like he is sat up properly as he was when I saw him. I assume this is how he was found.

His own shirt is raised and midriff exposed, he looks dishevelled. It seems like it would be difficult to slide into that position but I guess its possible.

I have a memory of him sat more upright and natural.

Dare I say it but there is a clearing of leaves to his left as if someone has sat there.

I do not recall seeing the red item at the scene. How can this have gone missing ?

Here are the photos from the PDA.

They raise a couple of points

In photo three - His right hand is in such a position that I think he had something in it that is not there when these were taken.....probably his phone, so it is likely that the phone has been taken from him after he has died.

There is a red item of clothing under his leg, there is no mention of this anywhere, whether it was searched, it doesn't appear to have been seized and after re-visiting the scene it is no longer there.

In photo two there is another item on the floor, possibly a jacket, again no mention of this if it was checked.

Hello,

Jack did not have a mobile phone on him when he was found. I've attached the three photos that i took on my pda. I will chase up the photo's which were taken by the scenes of crime officer and get them over to you.

Thanks, Dean

Good Afternoon,

Re: Jack Taylor

Could you please confirm whether Jack had a phone on him and if so whether this has been interrogated. Also, could you please confirm whether there was activity on his account to assist with his movements.
